DEPARTMENT OF ADVANCED HISTORICAL STUDY.

THE critical use of Historical Sources and the Method of Historical Composition have formed, from the first, an essential feature of the course of instruction provided at the School of Economics. In addition to the supervision afforded by the respective seminars, classes have been also held since Lent Term, 1896, for special instruction in Palæography, Diplomatic, and the Classification and Bibliography of Historical Sources. In connection with these classes a seminar has also been held for the purpose of practical instruction and exercise in the technical process of transcribing, extending and editing historical documents. These exercises have already resulted in the publication of the Receipt Roll of the Exchequer for Michaelmas Term of the thirty-first year of Henry the Second (1185), and the Pipe Roll of the Exchequer of the See of Winchester for the fourth year of the Episcopate of Peter des Roches (1207), edited by the class, in the series of publications issued by the School. This seminar has the further object of enabling research students to become acquainted with the contents of public archives and libraries by means of organised visits of inspection.

In the Summer Term of 1902 the instruction given at the School in the department of higher historical teaching was materially enlarged by the temporary endowment of a "Creighton" Lectureship in the "Study of Historical Sources." This was the result of a movement set on foot by the President of the Royal Historical Society and other distinguished scholars forming a "Committee for furthering Advanced Historical Study in London." The offer of the committee to defray the stipend of a lecturer for a period of three years was accepted by the Governors of the School, and the "Creighton" lectures in Historical Sources were forthwith arranged.

At the same time Mr. Passmore Edwards generously offered to provide an equal endowment for a second Lectureship in higher Historical Studies, and his offer having been accepted both by the Committee for furthering Advanced Historical Studies and by the Governors of the School, a "Passmore Edwards" lecturer was appointed for the purpose of continuing the systematic instruction in Palæography and Diplomatic, for which no adequate provision could be made from the "General Purposes Fund" at the disposal of the School. The technical subjects of the Classification and Bibliography of Historical Sources, which had hitherto been combined in the former courses on Palæography and Diplomatic, were specially recognised by the University of London in the appointment of a Teacher in Early Economic Sources, and a further course of lectures and a seminar have been established in this department.

Economic History, which occupies such an important place both in the general scheme of Historical Studies and in the Curricula of the University of London, is represented by a two years' course of lectures on "Modern Economic History," which is co-ordinated with several other courses, embracing "The Economic Position of the Great Powers," "The Organisation and Structure of Modern Industry and Commerce," "Foreign Trade," "Currency," etc., "Historical Geography," "French Commercial History," and elaborate courses on modern European History, Political and Economic.

In the Historical Section are also included several independent or subsidiary courses, such as the "History of Political Ideas," in Europe and the United States, the History of the English Poor Laws, the Constitutional History of England and her Colonies, Constitutional Law and History, "The Financial Systems of England, France and Germany" and "The Economic Position of England," Foreign Trade with the Far East, and "French Commercial History."

It will be evident from the above analysis of the work in the Historical department of the School that it affords perhaps unequalled facilities for the study of Mediæval and Modern History in its Political, Constitutional, Economic and Social bearings, as well as for the definite and scientific pursuit of Historical research.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Document which is described and printed in the following pages is preserved amongst the Records of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners which have been deposited in the Public Record Office since the year 1890. The modern official reference is to Ecclesiastical Commission, Various, Bdle. 22, Roll 159270, but in the older official lists of the Commissioners' archives the Roll bearing this number headed a long series of Rent Rolls of the Bishopric of Winchester extending from the year 1207 to 1455, with numerous gaps for the earlier period.¹ The Roll itself, like others of the series, once bore the 17th century press-mark, "1207. John 8^o. Roach 4^o." which has been replaced by a later official endorsement. The period thus assigned to it was derived from an erroneous calculation of the pontifical date.²

Classification of the Roll.

There are no existing means of tracing the life-history of these manorial Records, or of realizing their earlier official environment. Like the strong castle and stately palace in which they were once compiled and preserved, they serve to recall the princely state and fiscal establishment to which they owed their inception and execution in the days when the Norman rule was yet remembered in the land. Unlike the records of the Royal Exchequer, upon which they were largely based, these Rolls have not descended to us with any direct official traditions of their early custody, but from our knowledge of their later vicissitudes³ we have much cause for thankfulness that so large a number came into the careful custody of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.⁴ Fortunately, the Roll which has been printed in the following pages had escaped serious injury, and the skilful repair which it has undergone since its transfer to the Public Record Office still further facilitated the task of its transcription.

custody.

The Roll in its present state consists of 13 parchment membranes of the average length of 24 inches and the average width of 13 inches. The last membrane, however, contains only 17 lines of writing, and the spare parchment has long since been cut away.

The Palæo-
graphy.

The several membranes, which are now mounted on guards, were formerly secured by being loosely stitched at the top; but it would appear from other specimens of the class to which the document belongs that they were originally secured at the head by leather thongs passed between two pairs of eyelet holes at a slight distance apart. The lower extremity of

¹ 178 rolls exist for this period of 248 years, but of these several are the second parts of year rolls.

each membrane appears to have been shaped to a broad point, on which bands were laced for the purpose of securing the membranes in the form of a roll.¹ To the lower extremity of the last membrane a flap of stiff parchment was formerly attached, which served as an outer cover, and the greater part of this cover has still been preserved, and bears traces of the title of the Roll in a contemporary hand.²

At one time the consecutive numbers of the membranes were written in Roman figures at the apex of each membrane. Above them and along the whole width of the lower margin, the names of the manors are engrossed in Gothic capitals, with some minuscule letters intermixed. These, like the titles of the counties engrossed on the Exchequer Pipe Rolls, were evidently intended to serve as a means of ascertaining the position of a particular manor before unrolling the membranes; but, unlike the Exchequer Rolls, the titles are written on the front and not on the back of the membrane. Moreover, the entries are continued from membrane to membrane, so that the Roll has not the appearance of being composed of a number of roulelets, each consisting in the case of the Exchequer Records of two consecutive membranes. Thus the transition to book form in the middle of the 15th century was easily accomplished, the series of "Rent Rolls" being continued from the year 1458 as a new series of "Rentals" in vellum covers, still termed "Pipæ," and agreeing in all respects with the ancient enrolments.³

The penmanship of these episcopal accounts bears a marked resemblance to the stately hand of the Exchequer Pipe Rolls for the same period, though the characters are distinctly smaller and the writing is more compressed. The spacing of the entries, however, shows the same arrangement in both cases. As in many MSS. of the period, capital and uncial letters are still occasionally introduced in the middle of a word.

The fact that these enrolments were merely copies of original accounts will perhaps explain the numerous erasures and the sometimes unintelligent forms noticed in the following pages. Again, the addition of the individual sums is even more careless than that which is usually found in mediæval accounts, and in some cases the inconsistencies found almost excite a suspicion of fraudulent intent.

The system of contraction employed by the scribe resembles that observed in the contemporary Exchequer Rolls. In the official orthography of the Episcopal Roll provincialisms and Gallicisms are of rare occurrence, and phonetic forms are confined to a few vowel sounds, suggesting, with other indications, that the original Rolls were visually transcribed and were not dictated to the copyist. Few archaisms of any interest occur. The Old English character "ð" has a distinct value. "W" has the value of "uu," as in "wlpes" and "Wlveseia"; but it also stands for "v," as in "wellera." Variants in spelling, especially of proper names, are exceptionally rare, though some pronounced forms are to be seen in the Index. Not a few grammatical errors may be found, and certain irregular forms of syntax appear to be used without much regard for consistency.

³ This series is, however, separately classified in the official arrangement. There is a gap of three years between the two series.

Such formulas, however, as "In missis," "In venditis," "In mortuis," etc., may be regarded as purely technical, and their presence forms a characteristic feature of these manorial accounts. Of the frequent omission of the conjunction "et" mention is made elsewhere.¹

The document, of which the outward appearance is described above, is in the nature of an enrolment of the annual accounts rendered by the local officers of the bishopric of Winchester in respect of the receipts, issues, and stock of the episcopal manors in several counties. The Diplomatic.

Formula.—The form of these accounts is precisely similar to that of the typical manorial Compotus Rolls of a later period, with the exception that the statements of receipt and expenditure are couched in the formal style of the Exchequer Pipe Rolls. As usual the account contains three parts—the Charge, the Discharge, and the Schedule or Inventory of Stock. Each of these in turn contains several specific items, which are entered in regular order, with the usual distinction between the Arrears and Current Account and the Receipts and Expenditure respectively. The normal construction may be tabulated as follows:—

THE MANOR (or MINISTRY).²

NAMES OF OFFICERS ACCOUNTING.

The Charge.

I. The Receipt (Recepta):

- (1) The Arrears (Retragium) of former Accounts (if any).
- (2) The Redditus manerii,³ here found in the shape of Gafol (Gabulum assisum), Rents of assize (Redditus assisi), or increments thereof (Incrementum); less :
 - (a) Acquittances or rebates (Quietanciae) in favour of manorial servants ;
 - (b) Deficiencies (Defectus) for which the accountant is not liable.
- (3) The Exitus manerii, or produce realized ; usually subdivided into (a) uncultivated products (from pannage down to wild fruits and honey) and live stock, (b) grain and dead stock, including the issues of the mills.
- (4) The Purchasia,⁴ or issues of the manorial courts and other franchises together with the Tallage or Aid.

Total of the whole Receipts forming the Accountant's charge.

The Discharge.

- I. The Delivery (Liberatio) stating the several sums paid over to the Lord on account of the above receipts, and specifying the liability in respect of which it is paid, with the form of payment.⁵
- II. The Expense (Expensa) following in the case of the more important manors the later subdivision into the Expensa Necessaria, or upkeep of the implements, buildings and wages of labour or allowances ; and the Expensa Forinseca, or household and personal expenses of the Lord and his retinue.

Total of the Delivery and Expense forming the Discharge.

Balance of the Charge and Discharge.

² The "ministry" of Winchester and church of Meon are treated in the same way in every year, and in other Rolls the Scutage of the bishopric frequently appears as a distinct account.

³ This does not appear as a marginal heading till a later date.

⁴ Corresponding to the later term Perquisita Curie.

⁵ It is very noticeable that in the later accounts of the 13th century the "Liberatio" was used in an entirely different sense, namely, the payments out made at the exchequer to officers and servants. Thus the formula read: "In liberatione in thesauro apud Wolvesey per manus domini thesaurarii," &c. At this later date also the Liberatio followed the Expensa. The use of this form of entry in the present account seems to suggest the organization of a Receipt department of the Wolvesey exchequer (cf. infra, p. xi, n. 7).

Schedule A.—The Grain Account (Exitus Grangiæ) according to the several crops with the following formula of Account for the manor or mill:—

Charge:—

- (1) Bulk remaining from last year (Remanens anno præterito).
- (2) Bulk of this year's produce (De toto exitu hoc anno).
- (3) Bulk of grain transported (De allatis, receptis, proventis) or bought (emptis) or acquired (de cheriset).

Total (for each crop).¹

Discharge:—

- (1) Bulk expended in seed per acre (In semine—acrarum).
- (2) Bulk transported (missis, liberatis).
- (3) Bulk expended in allowances (In corredio, consuetudine, precariis, liberatione, donis, expensis) or provision (In præbenda, pascendis, pastu, cibo, pane, potagio, cervisia).
- (4) Bulk sold (In venditis).
- (5) Bulk remaining on hand (Remanens).

Total and State of Account (for each crop).¹

Schedule B.—The Stock Account (Instaurum) according to the several species in the following formula:—

Charge:—

- (1) Stock remaining from last year (Remanens anno præterito).
- (2) Increase of stock during the present year (De proventis hoc anno; de exitu).
- (3) Stock purchased (De emptis) or transferred (De proventis) or acquired (de testamento, purchasitis, decima, cheriset, consuetudine, redditu, pannagio, herbagio, potfulda, inventis).

Total (for each species).

Discharge:—

- (1) Stock rendered as tithe (In decimis).
- (2) Stock expended in allowances (In corredio, consuetudine, elemosina, donis, expensis, precariis, bederipa, medsip, companagio) or provision (In liberatis, occisis, missis ad lardarium).
- (3) Loss of stock by natural causes (In mortuis, devoratis).
- (4) Stock sold (In venditis) or transported (In missis, liberatis).

Total and State of Account for each species.

Schedule C.—The Larder Account (if distinct), the Salt Account, the Cellar Account, and the account of fruit and honey (if any).

Note as to final State of the Account (if required).

The above formula is consistently preserved throughout the Roll as well as during the succeeding period; but in certain instances, such as the manor of Privet and the submanors of Taunton, variations occur in conformity with local requirements, whilst a few simple variants are employed in other parts of the account.

Date.—It has been already observed that the date of this account has been incorrectly assigned to the year 1207,² and it would appear from internal evidence that it may be attributed to the fiscal year 1208–1209. The exact period covered by the account is, however, a matter of considerable importance in view both of its references to persons and political events, and also of its value for the illustration of certain economic conditions.

In the present case we might naturally expect that the pontifical date would be computed from September to September, since Godfrey de Luci died on the 11th or 12th September 1204, and Peter des Roches, although he did not receive the temporalities till March 1206, was conse-

erated on the 25th September 1205. Therefore the fourth year of this prelate should extend from 25th September 1208 to 25th September 1209, unless we had reason to suppose that the mere fact of his pre-occupation of the see with all its profits in virtue of royal mandates¹ during the preceding year had led the scribe to ignore the date of consecration for fiscal purposes.²

There is, however, another method of computing the period of these accounts from year to year; for whatever may have been the general practice in this respect,³ the fact that the revenues of the See of Winchester were administered in connexion with an exchequer at Wolvesey would seem to indicate that the procedure of the royal Exchequer was followed in this as in other particulars.

The Bishop's Exchequer.—It has been usual to compare the Bishop of Winchester's exchequer at Wolvesey with the royal Exchequer at Westminster, and it has been generally assumed that the annual audit of the episcopal revenues is recorded in the long series of stately muniments which still bear the title of "Pipe Rolls."

As no critical examination of the episcopal archives has ever been attempted, we must not attach a greater importance to this cursory description than it was meant to bear. With fuller opportunities for a diplomatic study of their contents it can, we believe, be shown that the series of inrolments, of which the earliest surviving specimen is printed in the following pages, does not correspond in any true sense with the Pipe Rolls of the royal Exchequer. The latter are primarily concerned, it is true, with the farms of the royal demesnes, and equally record the casual revenue of the Crown, together with the annual disbursements made by due authority. Similar information is also contained in the "Pipe Rolls" of the bishopric; but, for all that, the classification of the two species must follow different lines. The Exchequer Pipe Roll is, in fact, something more than a balance sheet of the territorial profits and perquisites of the Crown, for every source of royal revenue passed through this capacious conduit to fill the coffers of the Treasury. Now it will be evident at once that this purpose was not served by the existing episcopal account rolls, which take no cognizance of any temporal source of revenue external to the manors of the See⁴ or of any spiritualities whatsoever. And yet we cannot doubt that these sources of revenue were brought to account, just as they duly appear in the "states of account," which are fitfully preserved in later ecclesiastical and monastic registers.⁵

² In spite of these grants, the profits of the See for the year ending 29th September 1205 were rendered to the Crown at the Exchequer (Pipe Roll, 7 John, Hants). It is possible, however, that the intention of the grants was only to effect an assignment to the Bishop elect in connection with his extensive pecuniary dealings with the Crown.

At the same time it might certainly appear somewhat improbable that a whole series of such records compiled in the veritable form of the Exchequer Pipe Rolls should have entirely disappeared. Moreover, we have good reasons for believing that a simpler method of account was practised in the case of other seignorial establishments,¹ and this we know, from later accounts of the bishopric of Winchester itself, took the form of a periodical audit of the manorial accounts by experts employed for the occasion.²

The real explanation of the matter probably is that the bishopric of Winchester occupied an exceptional position in respect of its clerical establishment during the whole of the 12th and the early part of the 13th century. The proximity of the administrative centre at Wolvesey to the ancient royal Treasury and the official position of the great prelates who flourished during the whole of this period,³ would have facilitated if it did not actually induce an assimilation of clerical practice to that of the royal Exchequer.

Subsidiary Documents.—From an examination of the few isolated and fragmentary account rolls preserved in the archives of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester, and amongst the Records of the Court of Exchequer, we might conclude that the Roll before us represented a certain stage in the preparation of the manorial accounts of the bishopric for the purpose of the annual audit. In the first place there was the Computus Roll, or “particulars” of the account presented by the local serjeants and the bailiff for every manor. This *Computus Roll*⁴ in turn was compiled from several distinct manorial accounts, of which specimens of the grange and stock accounts during the 13th century have survived,⁵ whilst the separate existence of others, such as a Rotulus Redditalis and an estreat roll of fines of court, is fairly certain.⁶

Conventual Records.—It is interesting to find that this first draft of the account was made in precisely the same form as the inrolments with which we are concerned, and, curiously enough, the whole of this evidence is confirmed by the survival of certain muniments relating to the estates of the Prior and Convent of Winchester.⁷ From the almost identical methods employed by the clerical establishment of the Prior’s exchequer we may fairly conjecture that they used the style of the Bishop’s

² The expenses of these audits are given in 15th century accounts of the bishopric of Winchester and the Duchy of Lancaster.

⁴ Ministers’ Accts. Gen. Series, 1141, and Eccles. Comm. “Various.”

exchequer at Wolvesey;¹ but at the same time we find no trace amongst these conventual muniments of a ceremonious audit or fiscal establishment. On the other hand, we have a Rental or Customary dating back to 1221,² and other indications that the normal practice of the analysis of income and expenditure in a monastic precedent book was resorted to in the place of any independent attempt to follow the practice of the royal Exchequer to its climax in the composition of a great revenue roll.

This, then, is the real nature of the muniments with which we are here concerned. They are the official inrolments of a long series of accounts of manorial officers, specimens of which still survive in their original form from the beginning of the 14th century. The system here observed is, therefore, precisely similar to that employed for the official inrolment of ministers' accounts in the Pipe Office of the Royal Exchequer,³ and this similarity of practice favours the hypothesis that besides these inrolments of manorial accounts, actual Pipe Rolls recording the state of the whole episcopal revenue were compiled in the exchequer at Wolvesey.

Establishment of the Bishop's Exchequer.—Indeed, if this were not the case it would seem difficult to explain the allusions made in this and other accounts to an official who clearly acts as, and is elsewhere entitled, the Bishop's Treasurer, to an Exchequer and Treasury, to the departments of a Marshal,⁴ and a Constable⁵ to a "scriptorium" or "camera clericorum," to clerks, serjeants, and messengers, and to the regular provision of parchment at Wolvesey.⁶ Moreover, we have notices in the text itself of sessions of this episcopal Exchequer at which the Bishop presided on certain occasions in person, whilst adjournments from term to term are recorded in the precise form of King's Courts at Westminster. Finally, we have a distinct reference in the present account to a further record which is actually styled "Magnus Rotulus," this being the contemporary designation of the so-called "Pipe Rolls" of the royal Exchequer.⁷

The Great Roll.—That the record here referred to was not a preceding account roll of the same series,⁸ nor even a mere Rotulus Redditalis such as may be found in ecclesiastical and monastic registers from the 13th century onwards is proved, not only from the marginalia of this account, but to some extent also by the external evidence of the Exchequer Pipe Rolls themselves. Here the Accounts of the custody of the bishopric during vacancy have preserved several headings which presumably occurred in the episcopal rolls which must have been used for

⁶ cf. Dialogus de Scaccario (Clar. Press) p. 81, where the Sacristan of the cathedral church of Winchester is represented as supplying parchment for the royal Exchequer.

⁸ The technical reference to these seems to have been (as in the case of the Exchequer records) to a "rotulus anni præteriti, tertii," etc.

the purpose in hand.¹ Amongst these we find the "Terræ datæ," the "Liberationes constitutæ servientium maneriorum," and the "Elemosynæ constitutæ per maneria Episcopatus," the "Firma anni præteriti" and the "Nova firma."² The occurrence of these distinctive terms as early as the year 1172 would, moreover, seem to indicate an antiquity for this fiscal procedure which can scarcely be measured by existing records.³ But at least we have evidence that the series of inrolled manorial accounts with which we are immediately concerned existed for an earlier period than the year 1208,⁴ together with numberless allusions to questions of account going back to the days of Bishops Godfrey and Richard, and even to the time of Henry of Blois himself.⁵

An explanation of the use of the formulas of the royal Exchequer by the episcopal Scriptorium followed in turn by the conventual staff has already been suggested from the close proximity of the two establishments at an earlier date⁶ and the official relations of Peter des Roches and his predecessors with the royal Exchequer. When we add to this fact the personal interest displayed by these great statesmen in the administration of their estates,⁷ it is scarcely to be wondered if they made full use of the administrative model familiar to them.

Manorial Records.—One other consideration is suggested by the survival of this venerable series of rolls, namely, the antiquity of the system of compiling manorial accounts in the form that is so familiar to us in a later period. That such accounts were compiled in a very similar style on behalf of the temporal and spiritual princes of Western Europe from the beginning of the 9th century at least, we know from surviving examples, but we have here the means of tracing back the actual form in general use in this country in the middle of the 13th century to the closing years of the 12th, and we have also allusions to the same form at least as early as the middle of the reign of the first Angevin king.⁸ Moreover, the form referred to clearly implies the co-existence of another manorial record, the prototype, if not the actual model of the Court Roll, surviving specimens of which date as a class

¹ That they were so used in a later period is proved by several interesting remains preserved amongst the accounts of Bishops' Temporalities.

⁶ The Winchester account rolls preserve several indications of these relations under the heading of the Ministerium of Winchester.

only from the last years of the 13th century.¹ To these two classes of manorial records may perhaps be added most of the subsidiary accounts of the "Compotus" itself, namely, the inventories of grain and stock which reappear as schedules to the latter document, and the statement of rents and services which was in turn derived from inquests and surveys of immemorial antiquity.²

In the present account many incidental notices occur, as might be expected, of the Bishop's establishment as well as his public and private life, and these are supplemented by several historical allusions of more general interest.

Historical Notices.

In addition to the fiscal references cited above, we have others to the Bishop's wardrobe (peripatetic like the King's), to his household and kitchen, and to his princely hospitality. The cost of a dinner at Farnham, where the Bishop entertained the justiciary,³ William Brewer, and the Chancellor, is charged as 4s. 8d.

There are also many payments and allowances in connection with hunting and falconry, some of which are connected with royal visits, and the forester, verderer, and warrener are familiar figures in the manorial economy. On one occasion the Bishop buys hawks,⁴ and on another he buys or sells dogs at St. Giles' fair,⁵ whilst, as a result of the royal hunting, he incurs the cost of salting the King's venison,⁶ for which he perhaps recoups himself by selling 71 foxskins from Waltham to a Winchester tradesman.⁷ That wolves were still in evidence in Hampshire is clear from the entry under forest ponies devoured by these marauders.⁸

In connection with hunting occurs one of the few direct contributions of our Roll to the history of the period. This is found in the references to the severe drought of the summer of 1209, in the shape of payments for deepening wells and the substitution of cows' milk for that of the ewes in certain manors, "propter nimiam siccitatem."⁹ Apart from its economic importance, the incidental record of the occurrence of this drought is of considerable interest, owing to the fact that it does not seem to be mentioned by any mediæval historian. It is also possible that this phenomenon may explain an obscure passage in the chronicle of John of Oxnead,¹⁰ where we read that in this year the king ordered the hedges to be burnt down and the fences to be levelled in all the forest districts in England, leaving the forest beasts free to feed on the crops.

Now this transaction is taken by the Rolls editor to refer to an edict for the "free pasturage of cattle," but this could not in any case be the sense of the passage, since "bestia" is the technical expression for "beasts of the forest,"¹ and the act imputed to the king seems to be one of tyranny and not of munificence. It is not unreasonable to suppose, however, that the expedient was resorted to by the Crown to save the deer from starvation, owing to the failure of herbage; and it is interesting to find, though the fact is unnoticed in the only surviving Chancery Roll for the period, a writ despatched at this time from the king to the Bishop "pro defensa boscorum."² Perhaps, too, the drought may account for the considerable value of manorial herbage in this year, and payments for the home farms, as well as for the numerous fines "pro pastura" in the issues of the courts.

² These may be traced back in the case of the bishopric of Winchester to the beginning of the 10th century (Cart. Sax. 612, 618, 622), and through continental examples to the 6th century.

Such local notices as those which refer to the lepers of Farnham³ and the fire at the Bishop's palace of Marwell⁴ have some interest, and in this connection attention may be called to the survey of the arms of the hundred of Sutton,⁵ to the lighting of a beacon upon Quantock in Somersetshire,⁶ and the issue of the "new charter of liberties" in favour of the church of Winchester.⁷

As a source of historical reference, this Roll possesses a peculiar value as a means of supplementing, however slightly, the meagre notices which have survived of the movements of the Court between May and October of the year 1209. It is well known that, for some unexplained cause, the great series of Chancery Rolls are wanting for this and the two following years,⁸ and this void in the existing materials for a royal progress and its incidents has been partially supplied by the survival of a Wardrobe Account⁹ for the 11th year of the reign, and kindred records¹⁰ for the succeeding period. Now an examination of the first of these supplementary enrolments will show that it is chiefly concerned with the movements of the king and the affairs of State, which seem to have been largely transacted by the Bishop of Winchester who was in attendance during the greater part of the period between the Ascension and Michaelmas. Thus the information which our Roll supplies respecting the engagements of the Bishop, throws considerable light upon those of his royal master, in addition to supplementing the published itinerary of the Court in several particulars, though, unfortunately, the nature of the account does not enable us to fix the dates of certain of these notices. An itinerary showing the Bishop's movements and relations with the Court during the period of this account, is appended to the Preface.

The names of notable persons which occur in the Roll will be found in the Index.¹¹

It will be seen from the Table of Contents that the manors included in this Account are thirty-seven in number, reckoning the manors of Fawley and Ower, the manor and church of East Meon, and the Ministry of Winchester itself, as fiscal units. As this list obviously does not represent the full rent roll of the bishopric, it appeared to the Editors that some explanation of the discrepancy should be attempted. To present a complete list of the possessions of the See in the year 1208 would scarcely come within the scope of the present edition, although the task of tracing these possessions from the ninth century to the thirteenth has been essayed for the purpose of a preliminary investigation of the subject. But even when the full extent and position of the episcopal holdings have been ascertained, we are by no means justified in assuming that the accounts of certain manors should have appeared in the rent roll for a given year. In the first place it must be remembered that the distinction between the possessions of the Bishop himself and those of the Prior and Convent is, as in so many other cases, exceedingly obscure. Again, it will be found from a careful examination of the rent rolls for a subsequent period that the classification of the several manors is somewhat artificial, and that a hamlet which appears elsewhere as an independent estate may be included here in the account of the capital manor. Thus, in the present account no distinction is made, as in subsequent rolls, between Old and New Alresford, or between High Clere and Burgh Clere, whilst Waltham St. Lawrence and North Waltham are probably included in the accounts for the manors of Wargrave and Overton respectively. Other hamlets which held an independent position in the rolls of a later period cannot be distinguished under the principal manors, and in more than one case are certainly not included therein. Finally, we must bear in mind the possibility of the loss of one or more membranes of the existing record, a mutilation which can clearly be proved to have taken place in the case of more than one of the following year rolls.

The Episcopal Manors.

Therefore after every allowance has been made, it will be evident that certain recognised manors which duly appear in subsequent accounts are omitted from this roll.¹ It can also be shown that other manors which were, presumably, at this time in the Bishop's possession, are not represented in any of the accounts for the period.

These omissions do not, on the whole, amount to very much, but an explanation of their existence is still to be found. Possibly the manors in question were temporarily alienated from the possessions of the See, or were let to farm under conditions that precluded the necessity or possibility of their inclusion in the present series of accounts.

It is true that even in the case of a farmed manor the seignorial dues would have to be accounted for, and three such manors are, in fact, brought to account in this very roll. It may be suggested, however, that the "Perquisites" of a manor that was not actually in the lord's hand were not infrequently collected and rendered in the account of the tenant as farmer,² and that this account would have been included in the general account of the temporalities and spiritualities of the See, which must have been rendered at the Bishop's Exchequer in another form of enrolment. On the whole, therefore, it seems probable that the intention of the auditors at Wolvesey was to enter such manors as were occasionally at farm by way of a schedule to the regular series of bailiffs' accounts, in much the same way as certain foreign accounts were appended as a schedule to the earlier Pipe Rolls of the Royal Exchequer, and in both cases these entries were frequently appended to the local accounts instead of being entered on a separate membrane.¹

Local Notices.—The variations which have been noted in the titles of the Episcopal Manors are not perhaps sufficient to cause any real difficulty in their identification, in spite of the fact that the order of enrolment is perfectly haphazard, and that there are few indications of local identity in the body of the account. The principal manors of the See are easily recognised, but several difficulties have been encountered in the identification of tithings and field names.

Amongst the casual topographical notices to be found in these manorial accounts the enumeration of the tithings of various townships is of some value at this early date. Local archæologists will naturally be interested in the notices which occur here of the episcopal seats at Farnham, Taunton, and Winchester itself. To these may be added several references to the residences at Waltham, Clere, Marwell, Downton, Mardon, and Southwark.

Means of
cation.

Geographical Distribution.—Of the thirty-five manors accounted for in the roll, twenty-two lie in Hampshire. The rest are scattered here and there in the neighbouring counties, Southwark, Adderbury, and Taunton being the most distant on the east, north, and west respectively. The Hampshire manors fall into two main geographical divisions. The first, comprising sixteen out of the twenty-two, lies in the south-east of the county, along the upper and lower Itchen and its estuary, and in the chalk uplands to the east and west, forming an irregular circle round Winchester and Bishop's Waltham. The second, a compact geographical and economic group, lies in the high chalk downs on the northern border, with its centre in Bishop's Clere.² The isolated manor of Overton lies between the two. The external manors, scattered as they are, may also be considered as falling into two or three groups. Four manors³ lie in the basin of the middle Thames, and have special economic relations with Southwark. Two others⁴ situated on the tributaries of the upper Thames form outposts, as it were, of the estate to north and north-west.⁵ Farnham, on the River Wey, lies on the road between Southwark and Winchester. Finally, the three Wiltshire manors,⁶ with Rinton in Somerset, form geographically a chain of connection between Winchester and the important but isolated episcopal borough of Taunton.

Intermanorial Communications.—Although these manors collectively form a single economic whole, the internal management is, as a rule, entirely independent. There is ample evidence, however, of a casual interchange of grain and stock, and in a few cases it is possible to distinguish certain manorial groups, the distinctive feature being the rendering of the several accounts by one and the same serjeant, though by different reeves. These groups are collected as indicated in the following table.

GROUP.	SERJEANT.	REMARKS.
1. Clere - - - - } Woodhay - - - - } Ashmansworth - - - } Itchingswell - - - }	Johannes de Welton.	{ Clere is to some extent the centre of the group for the sale of produce and the supply of the bishop, but each manor is worked independently in respect of grain. In the stock account, however, there are traces of specialisation and consequent interchange in the different generations of sheep.
2. Alresford - - - - } Privet ¹ - - - - } Cheriton - - - - } Wield - - - - } Beauworth - - - - }	Henricus la Martre.	{ The manors are worked independently. Alresford sells part of the surplus produce of all. The bishop is supplied at Sutton directly from each manor.
3. Brightwell - - - - } Harwell - - - - }	Ricardus Serviens.	{ The grain is accounted for and sold separately, each sending a quantity to London (i.e. , Southwark) for sale. The stock shows the same specialisation as in the Clere group.
4. Mardon - - - - } Crawley - - - - }	Ricardus Serviens.	{ Though each sells separately, they are apparently worked in combination, the sale of large quantities of produce being thereby facilitated. The stock of oxen and sheep is also managed jointly without apparent specialisation.
5. Twyford (with Marwell) - - } Bishopstoke - - - }	Alvredus de Quinci.	{ Worked independently, but Stoke assists Twyford in the supply of the bishop at Marwell. A comparison of the accounts shows the bookkeeping to be distinct. Stoke ignores the agency of Twyford (indicated there) in the receipt of bacon from Wolvesey.
6. Bitterne - - - - } Fawley and Ower - - - }	Johannes Serviens.	{ Fawley and Ower are practically sub-manors, accounted for by Johannes as "serviens de Biterne." The expenses of the latter and the reeve of Bitterne visiting 15 times are charged in the Fawley and Ower accounts.

Markets.—The Roll affords very little evidence or illustration of the function of the special market in the manorial economy. Even within a group whose chief village (e.g. Clere and Alresford) is a market, it appears that the sale of a good deal of the produce takes place in each manor separately. In the isolated manors there is no evidence whatever of the method of sale, or of the disposal of the produce accounted for as sold. In the case of Brightwell and Harwell only does it appear from a record of the cost of carriage, that a portion of the wheat sold ($\frac{1}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{3}$ respectively) was despatched by water to London, and a comparison with the later Rolls shows that this sale was carried out by the agency of the Southwark centre.¹

Special Centres.—The following are the chief Centres for the receipt or supply of special commodities:—

1. Bitterne, which supplies salt to Downton, Farnham, and Sutton.
2. Southampton, the port of entry for foreign goods, e.g. millstones and wine. The latter is imported in bulk and packed for distribution by the Bitterne tenants.
3. Fareham appears to have been a depôt for wine, which forms a separate item in the “Instaurum.”

Relations with Headquarters.—The needs of the bishop and his household are supplied by the manors, either by delivery at the various episcopal residences, or by direct contributions to his maintenance from the manors at or near which he may be staying on his journeys. With the exception of the regular supply of hens and eggs to Wolvesey, and of pigs for the larder, these contributions are of such a casual nature that they appear to be a kind of occasional purveyance resembling the ancient Pastus, rather than the payment of a stated due—the amount supplied in kind simply reducing the total sum received from the sale of produce.

The episcopal seats draw their supplies for the most part only from the manors near at hand: Thus, Waltham receives supplies from 9 manors, all in South-east Hampshire. Wolvesey from 13 (6 being fiscal contributions), all in Hampshire. Downton from 5 manors rather more distant,² and Sutton almost wholly from the Alresford group. Southwark has direct relations with the manors of the middle Thames basin—Brightwell, Harwell, Wargrave, and Wycombe.

External Communications.—The following instances of transport to or from places outside the bishopric appear in the Roll.

Downton and Knoyle send supplies to the neighbouring royal seats of Cranborne and Gillingham respectively. Farnham, Downton, and Clere receive rams from Lincolnshire; Knoyle, wool from the same county; Southwark,³ timber from St. Leonard's Forest; Twyford, a horse from Devizes; Witney, horses from Cardiff, and Mardon and Clere, mares from Wales; Taunton receives wine from Exeter, spears from Wales, venison from Bridgwater, and a cart from Bristol, whilst Sutton charges for the carriage of a consignment of wool to Beaulieu and back, and Witney for the carriage of arms and provisions to and from Tewkesbury.

Routes.—In respect of routes, the Roll furnishes little information. Corn from Brightwell and Harwell goes to London by water. So, naturally, do the consignments of wine from Portsmouth to Fareham, and from Southampton to Bitterne, whilst presumably the timber from Kingston and the brushwood from Wargrave would have been similarly conveyed. The most interesting entry in this connection is the charge for the carriage of wool from Bishops Sutton to Beaulieu and back "per aquam," i.e. by the Itchen navigation, the canal made by Bishop Godfrey de Luey a few years earlier.

¹ The later Rolls give rather more evidence of special markets. An account for the Forum de Alresford appears in 1211, as also does an account for the granges at Southwark, showing that a very large proportion of the grain received from the Thames manors was disposed of by sale.

² This manor is isolated, and was visited more than once by King and bishop.

³ In addition to this entry, references to “London” under Brightwell, Harwell, Wycombe, and Wargrave evidently refer to the manor of Southwark.

Cost of Carriage.—As a rule transport and the moving of stock forms part of the labour service due from the manors. The few records of payments for carriage refer to exceptional commodities such as wine,¹ millstones, wool, and in one instance salt; or to distant places—London, Tewkesbury, Beaulieu; or to carriage for the casual pleasure of the bishop.² In the account for the church of Meon, the collection of the tithe and the transport of the produce to Winchester and Marwell appear to have been outside the obligations of the bishop's tenants. The cost of carriage, as might have been expected, is somewhat high. A tun of wine from Southampton to Waltham costs 1s. 2d. To Witney the cost is 6s., and to Marwell 1s. 7½d. From Portsmouth to Fareham by water the charge is only 6d., and from Southampton to Bishops Sutton, where the Itchen navigation could be used, 1s. 6d. The corn sent from Brightwell and Marwell to London costs 2d. a quarter, and a millstone from Southampton to Winchester 1s.

Travellers.—The visits of several of the bishop's officers to the various manors are recorded, but the entries are so often undated, that they afford no evidence of any systematic visitation or of the movements of the bishop's household. There are also, here and there, charges for the maintenance of occasional travellers, notably at the outlying manor of Witney, which was visited by King and bishop, and which seems to have been a starting-point for journeys to the North and West (York, Lincoln, Northampton, Cardiff, Tewkesbury). Harwell entertains the bishop's knights on their way back from the Scotch expedition;³ Clere the men who carried the bishop's harness to Gloucester, and to Witney after he had left; and Southwark the "Milites de Hispania."

On the manors of the Bishop of Winchester the conditions of employment appear to be somewhat primitive. The necessary ploughing, mowing, and reaping were almost entirely performed by the tenants as a condition of their tenure, so that the relation of the tenants to their lord determines the relation of most of the labourers to their employer. Money wages are paid, but to a small extent, and by far the greater part of the agricultural work is performed by the tenants by way of service.

The Manorial Economy.

The payments of the tenants to their lord are made in (1) money, (2) kind, (3) service, and (4) as a mark of subjection to the lord's jurisdiction.

1. Payments in Money.—The chief payment made in money is the "land-gafol" (gabulum). In two of the Berkshire manors, however, and also at Southwark "rents of assize" (redditus assisi) are found. In normal years these charges furnished more than a third of the total revenue from all sources. Here the proportion is somewhat less owing to the incidence of the Tallage. The system by which it increased and decreased appears from the details of the "incrementum" and "defectus."

The Incrementum.—The incrementum refers to the increase of rent in the year of the account only; next year it is added to the gross amount of the gabulum, which thus continuously increases.¹ Sometimes new houses are built (at Brightwell, a new fulling mill), and for these in future years rent is paid which increases the gabulum.² But a more considerable addition arises from the cultivation of waste land. At Cheriton rent is now first paid for two encroachments,³ while at Witney £2 11s. 1d. in this one year forms a permanent increase "de assarto."⁴

Another cause of an increase of the gabulum was the letting of the demesne land at a money rent. At Witney 12s. 6d. more is paid this year because some of the demesne land had been so let.⁵

The Defectus.—The decrease in the gabulum may be due to causes operating over a long period of time, as can be well seen in the accounts of the Ministerium Wintoniæ. But the most important decrease arises from the enlargement of the demesne. Thus at Clere one piece of land taken in reduces the gabulum by 64s.; another portion of 335 acres by 37s., whilst at Otterford also the rent is reduced "pro dominico elargando"⁶ and in most of the manors both large and small pieces of land appear as "tractæ in dominium."⁷ These deficiencies also did not arise in one year, but in a series of years dating probably from the beginning of the accounts. These entries, therefore, show that there was then little tendency to decrease the amount of land held in the lord's own hand, either for pleasure or profit. In one case, however, we find a holding "quæ modo operatur et non solebat."⁸

Firma burgi.—Besides the regular gabulum, Taunton and Farnham paid a "firma burgi" and Wallingford a "burgagium."⁹ This means that the sums due from the burgesses of these towns were farmed for a lump sum, unless the town was "in the lord's hand."

Firmæ.—In the case of three manors "farms" are paid to the lord,¹⁰ and in several other cases part of the produce of the manors is farmed. Fawley, indeed, seems to have been only a sheep farm.¹¹ Sheep are also farmed at Hambledon,¹² and their milk at Menes.¹³ Rimpton seems to have been lately at farm.¹⁴

On most of the manors mills also are let at farm,¹⁵ though in others they are kept in the lord's hand, and have their own profit-and-loss account.¹⁶

Besides the gabulum, rent was paid for the use of certain demesne lands entered in the accounts as Terræ Locatæ. At Waltham, Bitterne, and Sutton the lands so let were rented at about 2d. per acre.¹⁷

¹ Thus at Waltham the gross gabulum is as follows:—1208, 46l. 7s. 2½d.; 1210, 46l. 11s. 4½d.; 1211, 46l. 17s. 4½d.; 1290, 75l. 3s. 11d.

² At both Downham and Alresford there were new markets; in the former town ten places were newly assized.

The usual payments, Herbage and Pannage, for the use of pasture by cattle and sheep and for feeding the swine in the woods, occur in every manor.

In addition to these various forms of rent a "tallage" is paid in nearly every manor, but at Taunton a "scutagium" takes its place. This tallage was exceedingly heavy, amounting to little less than the net gabulum. Probably its occurrence in this year is due to the heavy national taxation of the year 1207.

Akin to the tallage is the sum paid "de redditu annuo" at Wargrave. This seems to have been a regular annual payment over and above the rent.

Local Dues.—Other payments made to the lord were the "hundred penny," and sums paid in several places "de telonio tabernarii."¹ There were also the inevitable "scotales," from which at Sutton as much as 3*l.* 10*s.* 8½*d.* was received.

Peter's pence was presumably paid to the bishop in his ecclesiastical character. It occurs in the accounts of Witney, Downton, Wycombe, and Rimpton.²

The money payments made by the tenants are thus very considerable in number and amount. The payments in kind are less important.

2. Payments in Kind.—"Church scot" (Cheriset) was another payment made to the bishop as representative of the Church. The payment was made partially in money at Downton, Sutton, and Knoyle,³ but it was usually paid in grain⁴ and in poultry.⁵ Payments in kind were also made "de redditu." At Waltham 2*lb.* of cummin were due,⁶ two thousand eggs at Clere,⁷ and hens at Witney⁸ and other places. At Downton also forty-seven sheep were rendered "de consuetudine herbagii."⁹

A more important obligation was connected with the lord's fold (Pot-falda). The sheep of the tenants were obliged to lie on the lord's land so that his land and not theirs was enriched by the manure. In several manors money is given by the tenants for the relaxation of this privilege.¹⁰

Multure.—Another right largely exercised by the mediæval lord was that of obliging his tenants to grind their corn at his mill. There is little trace of any payment for the relaxation of this burden in this Roll. At Holway a fine is paid "pro moltura,"¹¹ and in the accounts of some of the mills we hear of payments as "moltura" which at Flodstoc amounted to 39*s.* 6*d.* "in denariis."¹²

A payment is made at Bishops' Hull to be quit of the Bishop's beer,¹³ and this may indicate that the Bishop claimed a monopoly of brewing as well as of grinding corn.

3. Payment in Service.—But apart from the payment of rent or dues as above, the tenants also rendered service to the lord, either as manorial officers or as ordinary labourers, in a specified manner.

Manorial Officers.—In nearly every manor several manorial officers are found. These may be divided into three classes:—(1) Those who held land and were rewarded for their services by abatements in rent¹ (quietancia), and sometimes also by payments in kind or money (consuetudines); (2) those who were probably household servants and were paid principally by small salaries (stipendia) and by allowances in grain (corredia); and (3) the more important officials who received much higher salaries (liberationes).

To the first class belong the reeve and the typical manorial officers. Besides the præpositus there is sometimes a bedellus, or foreman, usually in connection with a sub-manor.

Forestarii are present in the forest manors and were presumably manorial officers.² In any case they received an abatement of rent.

In nearly all the manors³ there are many ploughmen (carucarii). These apparently ploughed every day except Saturday, and if they ploughed on Saturday they were paid for so doing. Thus, at Stokes, eight ploughmen receive abatements of rent, and eight are paid for ploughing on eight of the Saturdays between Easter and Michaelmas. On the remaining sixteen Saturdays they receive no payment because they ploughed their own lands.⁴

On most of the manors there were also swineherds, cowherds, oxherds, haywards, shepherds, and a certain number of operarii, all of whom must have held land, as they were paid by quietancia. Other officers more rarely mentioned are the *grangiarius*⁵ or berebrettus,⁶ special guardians for the corn, for the lambs, or for the cows;⁷ one manor has a "parcarius"⁸ and besides a special man to care for the horses. At Downton, we find a plot of land held for the special service of repairing the bridge.⁹

The most necessary work which was not agricultural was that of the smith. In many manors he received an abatement of rent,¹⁰ but in others he was paid in money.¹¹ Thus, at Farnham, the smith shod a certain number of the horses by custom¹² and was paid for shoeing the rest. In addition, the ironwork of ploughs, carts, and harrows was paid for,¹³ as well as the iron about the mills.¹⁴

Consuetudines.—The manorial officers occasionally received perquisites (consuetudines) as part of the reward of their labour. Thus, the swineherd receives a pig, the shepherd a lamb or fleece,¹⁵ the ploughmen have barley and cheese,¹⁶ the forester has a pig,¹⁷ and the smith a lamb.¹⁸ Payments to the ploughmen are also made in money¹⁹ (as at Harwell and Brightwell).

² This is more doubtful in the case of the verderers who also occur.

³ Wycombe and Farnham are exceptions.

The Stipendiaries.—The class below the above receive stipendia in lieu of remission of rent.¹ At Waltham they consist of seven oxherds, three carters, a gardener, a cowherd, and a dairymaid, and they are there styled famuli. The men receive an annual salary of 3s., the dairymaid 2s., and like salaries are paid elsewhere. Besides their salary they received allowances in grain (corredia), generally from six to six and a half quarters, and from this it would seem that barley formed the staple bread of the poor on these manors, varied by curall and mancorn. Taunton is, however, an exception, wheat being used on nearly all the sub-manors there. Occasionally, but not often, these servants also receive consuetudines. This was especially the case with the dairymaid, who usually received a cheese as part of her reward.²

“Liveries.”—The third class of manorial servants comprises those who received liberationes. These were not so much manorial workers as special agents of the lord. Amongst these would be a great officer like the constable of Taunton,³ and lesser people like the warreners of Waltham and the serjeants who had charge of groups of manors.⁴ The ordinary payment for these seems to be a salary of £3 0s. 10d. a year, or twopence a day.⁵

Besides these local officers there were others who visited the manors at special times for particular services. Such are the knights and others who survey the forests,⁶ the verderers who visit Clere and Witney,⁷ the huntsman in charge of dogs,⁸ fishermen,⁹ and officials who prepare for the coming of the bishop and look after his kitchen.¹⁰

The Seneschal.—At the head of the manorial officers was the seneschal or steward.¹¹

Operarii.—From the ranks of the tenants also came the labourers who performed the agricultural work in most of the manors; but as there is no separate account of the “opera” at this date, we have only occasional information as to their number and services. Among them were the operarii who receive quittances on the various manors. At Farnham one operarius worked every day in autumn and every other day for the rest of the year, nine worked every other day throughout the year, and three worked in September.

Virgatarii.—At Witney forty virgatarii receive quietanciae because of autumn work, and ten for winter work. Ten find five ploughmen for the whole year except Saturday, and two find a ploughman for quarter of the year. At Brightwell twenty-two virgatarii found fifteen men who worked every day except Saturday from the feast of SS. Peter and Paul until Michaelmas. At Brightwell and at Adderbury there were also cottagers (cotagii). But we only hear of these people because they receive quietanciae.

Of the tenants who worked and received no quietanciæ there is little record. We hear of a provision of seed on the lord's part for the villeins in some of the sub-manors of Taunton. But besides the regular "works" the payments on account of precarix and bedripæ seem to show that these were general and well attended. On most of the manors there were precarix in winter, in Lent, and in autumn, and there was also a precaria for the mowing of the great meadow.

Commutation.—One of the most remarkable features of the Roll, so far as it relates to labour, is the comparatively slight mention made of money paid in lieu of service. For thirty-one of these manors the amount received by the bishop by way of commutation for service is only £10 17s. 3d. The very gradual extension of this practice of paying money instead of rendering service is one of the most interesting features of the accounts during the next hundred and forty years. The practice gradually makes its appearance in nearly all the manors and slowly increases, but even in 1348 it does not reach a very considerable amount.

Wages.—But besides the work done by the tenants for their lord, some work is paid by money wages. At Privet and Wield most of the labour is performed in this way, whilst in many of the manors threshing and winnowing is paid for in money. In most cases, however, the wages bill does not exceed £2 10s. The wages paid varied considerably; at Waltham men are paid 1½d. a day and women ¾d., and this seems about the usual rate for a day's work.¹ Especially low wages were paid at Farnham, and much higher ones at Wycombe.²

There is little information as to the wages of artisans. Two sawyers at Taunton earned at the rate of about 1s. 5d. a week each. Carpenters in Southwark earned 3d. a day, but wages would naturally be higher near London.

This account indicates the existence of manufactures by its mention of fulling mills. They existed in three manors,³ and a new one was built at Brightwell and had already begun to be profitable.⁴

With regard to the poor also the accounts afford certain information. The bishop frequently gives alms, though there are not instances on every manor, but only occasional gifts to individuals.⁵ Thus from Waltham he gives six bacons to the sick,⁶ from Cheriton he sends a quarter of wheat to a certain woman at Winchester.⁷ From Witney, Farnham, and Sutton alms and provisions are given to the lepers,⁸ and at Farnham money to a hermitage,⁹ and wheat to the monks of Winchester.¹⁰

Besides this, at Rimpton, a feast seems to have been given at the lord's expense; the whole Hundred was entertained at Christmas and flesh and grain were provided for their entertainment.¹¹

¹ Sowing at Rimpton costs 2d. a day, threshing 1d. At Bitterne two men and one boy obtain 2s. for six days.

² At Farnham the rate for both winnowing and threshing wheat was 1½d. a quarter; at Wycombe 2½d. for threshing only. The average rates were as follows:—Threshing wheat and mancorn 2d. per quarter; threshing barley about 1d. per quarter. Ploughing at Woodhay and Overton costs 2d. an acre.

4. The Lord's jurisdiction.—Besides the agricultural services owed by the tenants, they also owed service at the lord's Court, and the fines they there paid formed a profitable source of revenue. Many of these fines are connected with the possession of land. Heavy fines are often paid for heriots and for reliefs¹ as well as for admission or to keep possession.² Other fines are connected with agricultural service; for failure to attend the lord's work,³ or for doing it in an incompetent manner.⁴ But perhaps most of the fines are for trespasses of various kinds, especially on pasture.⁵ A few concern the keeping of order, breaches of the peace,⁶ and making false claims.⁷ Some are from the whole hundred or tithing, sometimes for concealment⁸ of offences, and at other times for an offence not stated, probably non-appearance.⁹ Others relate to the disabilities of the villein status. Payment is constantly made for marrying a daughter,¹⁰ sometimes for marrying a sister,¹¹ and fines are exacted for dealing in cattle without leave,¹² or for licence to leave the manor.¹³ At Itchingswell a man is fined because his brother left the precaria without licence.¹⁴

From the Balance Sheet given in the Appendix it will be seen Crops. that the sale of corn provided one of the most important sources of the Episcopal revenue, being equal to about one-half of the net gabulum, and nearly 16 per cent of the total receipts. In addition to the usual grain crops of wheat, barley, and oats, most of the manors cultivated also a fourth crop, consisting either of mixed corn ("mancorn" or mestilo) or of rye (silligo or sigalum). Mestilo seems to have been the Berkshire, Buckinghamshire, and Oxfordshire name for the crop which was more generally known as "mancorn," i.e., "mang-corn," for each term indicates a mixture. In no instance do both terms appear in the same grange account, and in the case of Wargrave the quantity sold is entered as mestilo in the grange account, and as "mancorn" in the sale account. In most cases it probably consisted of wheat and rye, but only slight indications are given of the nature of the mixture.

Rye by itself seems to have been grown as an equivalent crop in the Surrey, Oxfordshire, and Somersetshire manors, and in one case only, viz., the Church of Meon, do both rye and mixed corn appear in the same account. However, it is doubtful whether what is called silligo or sigalum was not itself a mixture, for in the case of Adderbury a small quantity of mestilo bought for seed is entered under rye in the grange account, and in the case of the Taunton mills the produce of rye is entered in the sale account as rye and barley, presumably a mixture of these grains.

It is curious that there is no mention of drageum, a mixture of barley and oats, which is of frequent occurrence in mediæval manorial accounts. It is also worthy of note that no barley was grown in the Somersetshire manors in the previous year, and that in the current year only a few acres were sown with this grain, possibly by way of experiment.

The grain referred to as curailum or curallum appears to have been small corn of wheat. Its price was comparatively low, and it was never used for seed, except in one case, when it was mixed with "mancorn."¹ It was generally accounted for separately, but in some cases it was included with the wheat,² barley,³ and "mancorn"⁴ respectively, although in the last it was stated to be small corn of wheat.

Harwell, Brightwell and a few other manors derived a certain amount of wheat from the custom of Churchscot, and at Fareham and Bishop's Stoke a small quantity of rye and barley, respectively, was derived from the same source.

In addition to the cereals, the leguminous crops of peas, beans, and vetches were occasionally grown, but in comparatively small quantities, the largest area tilled being nine acres of peas at Alresford. Beans were planted in the garden at Downton⁵ and apparently both beans and peas in the new apple-orchard of the Church of Meon (East).⁶

An analysis of the grain crops is given in an Appendix, which shows in tabular form for each manor the total produce of each crop, the number of acres sown, the quantity used for seed, the quantity sold, and the average price per quarter. The following is a summary of the whole, with the addition of corresponding figures for small corn and legumes, the quantity consumed being calculated from the difference between the total produce and the sum of the quantities sown and consumed or sold:—

—	Wheat.	Mixed Corn.	Rye.	Barley.	Oats.	Small Corn.	Legumes.
Total produce in quarters - -	3,679	915	310	1,750 $\frac{1}{4}$	7,507 $\frac{1}{2}$	382	80

Quantity consumed in quarters -	323	98	91	543 $\frac{1}{2}$	2,831	149 $\frac{3}{8}$	30 $\frac{3}{8}$

The most interesting fact revealed by these figures is the extremely small yield of the various crops. Assuming that the total acreage and quantity sown were approximately the same as in the preceding year, we get the remarkable result that the yield per acre of wheat was only 4·3 bushels, mixed corn 4·3 bushels, rye 4·5 bushels, barley 7·4 bushels, and oats 8·2 bushels. It should, however, be noted that in the case of Downton the produce of mixed corn was 50 quarters less than the quantity sown and sold, owing perhaps to a clerical error in the account. In all other cases the two sides of the account are either exactly or approximately equal. It is also curious that, with the exception of oats in a few of the manors, there was hardly any corn in hand either at the beginning or the end of the year. However, it may be that the corn in hand was not always entered, for at Taunton it is stated that at the end of the year there were 65 quarters of oats remaining in the grange, as well as two stacks of the same grain and two stacks of wheat, although the whole produce of the year had been disposed of in seed, customs, provender, and sale. At Wield, too, a stack of wheat, containing about 50 quarters, was sold for £8, but was not accounted for in the grange account.

Another interesting feature indicated by the above figures is the comparatively small amount consumed, especially of wheat and mixed corn. Less than 9 per cent. of the former, and only a little more than 10 per cent. of the latter were actually used on the manors, and the percentages of rye, barley, and oats were 30, 31½, and 37¾ respectively; the large percentage of oats is chiefly due to provender for the horses of officers and distinguished visitors, the amount allowed on such exceptional occasions being apparently one bushel for each horse daily. The oxen were probably fed on sheaves (garbæ) during the winter.¹ All the cereals except wheat, were occasionally used for feeding the Bishop's or the King's dogs, and all were apparently malted and used for brewing beer for the boon works, scotales, &c. The wheat was used mainly in making bread for the Bishop and his officers, but was occasionally consumed at the boon works or given in customary allowances to certain servants.

Barley was chiefly disposed of in allowances to various labourers, but was used also in making bread for the boon works, and in feeding pigs in winter. Of the small corn, about 61 per cent. was sold, and the remainder consumed in a similar manner to the barley. The peas and vetches were used chiefly for feeding pigs in winter.

Corn was measured both by the strike bushel (estrica) and the heaped bushel (hopa), but in adding them up to form the totals, no apparent distinction is made between them and eight of each are reckoned as equivalent to a quarter.

Wild Growths and Forage.—In addition to the proceeds from the customs of pannage and herbage, which occur in nearly every manor, there are occasional sales of nuts (nuces), underwood (busca), rushes (juncus), stubble (stipula), flax (linum), haulm (culmus), reed (arundo), meadow grass (herba), pasture, twigs (coperones), dead wood (morbois), and briars (bruera). Hay and forage were frequently bought for the oxen and horses, and at Adderbury a large quantity of forage was sold. In the latter manor, and at Southwark there are records of sales of apples, and there were apple orchards also at Meon and Marwell.

Mills.—About fifty mills are enumerated, and of these about one-half were let to farm at a fixed annual rent, while the remainder were kept in hand, an income being obtained from them by sale of the produce. Four are stated to have been fulling mills, and it is believed they are the earliest recorded in this country. They were situated at Bishop's Waltham, Brightwell, Bishop's Sutton, and Alresford. The first and third were let for 20s. and 11s. 1d. respectively. The second, which had been newly made for 9l. 4s. 4d., was retained in hand, the produce for a part of the year being sold for 16d. At Alresford the rent of the mill is apparently included in the gabulum, but the large sum of 8s. 3d. was paid for collecting stubble for it, possibly for the purpose of roofing it. All the other mills were probably corn mills driven by water power. At Fareham there was a "sea mill" (molindinum maris), which may have been either a tide mill or a floating mill operated by the currents. A millstone for this mill cost 25s. 4d., including carriage from Southampton, and slates for roofing it were bought for 9½d. The price of millstones varies from 36s. to 13s. 4d. The river mills seem to have been of the usual type. Each apparently had a pair of horizontal stones, of which the upper was supported by a bail (bila) on an iron spindle working in a footstep (inka), and was driven by lantern and pin gearing from the wooden spindle of the water wheel. This wheel was carried by arms (brachii) and provided with buckets (alvi), and it was supplied with water by a shoot (alico) from the mill-pond (stagnum). The pond was sometimes stocked with fish, and then served also as a fish-pond (vivarium). At Brightwell young fish (pisciculi) were bought for stocking the fish-pond, and at two of the Winchester mills fish were sold and small amounts were paid for repairing the fisheries. At Taunton 15 sticks of eels were obtained from the fish-pond and mills, and at Twyford 1,100 eels were sold for 9s. 2d. At Taunton, too, payment was made, in connection with the Borough mill, for repairing three fishing-nets.

The produce of the mills, which was doubtless derived as toll from the tenants, consisted chiefly of wheat and mixed corn, but in most cases malt (braseum) and meal (gruellum) also were sold, and in the Taunton mills the former is separated into two different qualities (braseum and contrabraseum). The average prices of these mill products were: Wheat, 2s. 11d. per quarter; mixed corn, 1s. 4½d.; meal, 2s. 10d.; malt, 2s. 4d.; and malt of inferior quality, 1s. 2d.

A molindinum ad braseum is mentioned (at Twyford), and it will be observed that malt is a usual product of the mills. As this staple of brewing is not mentioned in any other connection, it is perhaps possible to infer a combination of milling and malting. The function of the crapestre (later crupestre) mill at Winchester is referred to in the Glossary.

Buildings.—The occasional references in the Roll to the various farm and other buildings are not sufficient to enable a definite picture of each homestead to be formed, but a consideration of the whole series of entries gives some indication of the nature and arrangement of the buildings of a typical manor. These entries occur under the heading Expensa, and relate almost entirely to roofing and repairing the various houses,¹ but a few instances of new houses furnish some information as to their prime cost.

It is probable that all the buildings were in most cases situated around the courtyard (curia), which, however, appears to have been complete in itself, for it was surrounded by a hedge and a ditch² and entered by one or more doors. The ditch was often made at considerable expense, that at Wield costing 8s. 1d., and that at Burghelere 5s. 6d. At Downton the yard was called a barton (bertona), and a ditch of 22 perches was made in it at the rate of 3½d. per perch. A door to the same barton cost 1s. It is likely that all the sheds for animals opened into this barton or court, for the dung produced was stored in it until it was required to be spread on the land.

The dwelling-house, which in most manors consisted merely of the usual hall and chamber (aula and camera or thalamus) probably occupied one side of the court, and near it or adjoining it stood the dairy, which was in some cases a very simple structure of wood, for a new one at Witney cost only 3s.

In the larger manors the larder and kitchen were, no doubt, placed at the same side. The kitchen, too, was often of wood, and, as at Bitterne, was liable to be burnt, but a new one, which was made for the Church of Meon at a cost of 59s. 3½*d.*, must have been of a more substantial character. The chief larder seems to have been at Downton, but there were others at Bishop's Waltham, Witney, and Farnham. Under Downton, too, there are entries relating to a pantry, a buttery, and a cellar.

The house at Marwell, near Twyford, which was used by the bishop as a residence, was much more elaborate than the ordinary manor houses.¹ The chamber had been burnt, and it was rebuilt and other parts repaired at a cost of over 10*l.* This chamber had walls wholly or partially of stone and a timbered roof, and it was furnished with the unusual convenience of a window. The cloisters and the porch of the hall were tiled, and leaden gutters and a chimney were also provided. A chapel is recorded at this place, at Highclere, and at Bitterne.

The grange seems to have been a large building for storing corn in the sheaf, for several of the manors had also a granary for storing grain. Both were surrounded by a ditch.² Some of the granges must have been substantial stone buildings. The great grange at Mardon cost the large sum of 4*l.* 5s. 9½*d.*, while a granary at Cheriton was built for 25s. In three other instances the cost of making a new grange was only about 10s.

The sheep-shed (bercaria) was also in many manors an important structure. At Twyford a new one was made for 29s. 7*d.*, but in other cases a new one cost only 12s. 8*d.*, 8s. 4*d.*, and 6s. 2*d.* respectively. This shed, like the court, was enclosed by a hedge and a ditch. The former was formed either with pales and twigs (palæ and ramillæ),³ or with brushwood (clostura).⁴ At Alresford six hedges were made for 2s. The ditch varied in length in different manors from 114 to 21 perches, but it was dug at the uniform rate of 3*d.* per perch. The building itself was roofed either with tiles or straw, walled with boards, and provided with a door, which in one case cost 1s.⁵

There are fewer entries relating to the cattle-shed (bovaria), and no new one was built, but it was probably similar to the sheep-shed. However, it is possible that in some cases the building was dispensed with, and its place taken by an open enclosure (præsepe boum).⁶ The hedge was made of poles (virgæ).⁷

Nearly every manor has entries relating to the fold (falda), which was made of wattled hurdles. At Mardon 36 hurdles were made and 52 wattled for 2s. 1*d.*, while in other cases hurdles were bought at the rate of three or four a penny.

Occasional references are found to a stable (stabula), a dovecot (columbaria), a poultry-house (gallinaria), a pigstye (porcaria), a cart-house, and a pound (punfalda). At Downton a new dovecot was built for 22s. 11½*d.*, and at Bishop's Sutton a poultry-house was made for 2s. 3*d.*, and a pigstye for 1s. 6*d.*

Implements.—In each manor there are entries of payments made for the cost of ironwork for the ploughs and carts, and for shoeing the horses, but the amounts vary so much that no useful deduction can be derived from them. The plough was obviously a very simple contrivance, and the cost was very small indeed, for the woodwork (mairemium) was provided by the lord, and the carpenter and smith were in most cases hired at a fixed annual wage. Thus, in separate entries we find the cost of making six new ploughs "before the carpenter came" 1s.; of making one plough 1d.; of making three ploughs and plough-wheels 6d.; and of making three new ploughs 6d. The price for a pair of plough-wheels seems to have been about 3½d., but this doubtless included the ironwork as well.

The carts were much more elaborate, and were of two distinct kinds, viz., the ordinary wooden cart, costing from 1s. 6d. to 3s. 8d., and the iron-bound cart, having also its wheels bound with iron, costing from 6s. 6d. to 11s. 1d. One such cart, and three additional pairs of wheels, were bought at Bristol for 38s. 8d. A pair of ordinary cart-wheels cost 1s. In some cases the term biga or karrus is used instead of the more general careta, but there does not appear to be any essential difference between them. However, it is possible that the biga was of lighter construction than the careta, for three "for marling" were bought for 7s., a new one bound with iron cost only 5s. 7d., and two pairs of wheels were bought for 3s. 7d. The karrus, on the contrary, may have been heavier, for at Taunton seven pairs of wheels were bought at an average price of 3s. 3½d. The plaustrum used for marling at Bitterne was possibly a waggon with four wheels.

Other implements are only mentioned occasionally. Harrows were bought for 2d. each; baskets (corbellæ) for carrying corn, etc., 2½d.; another "bascat," 1d.; a seedlip, 1d.; a winnowing-fan (vannus), 14d.; other fans (ventorii) for cleaning corn, 6d. and 7d.; a reaping-hook, 1s. 1½d.; a bushel measure, 2d.; three sieves, 2d.; a bucket or trough for watering the oxen, 4d.; a "bokett" and cord for drawing water from the well, 4d.; a tun for cider, 1s.; locks, about 2¼d.; picks, 5¼d.; a gardening spade and hoe, 4½d. Sacks cost from 4d. to 9d., and canvas for making them 2d. per ell.

Stock.

The Instaurum, generally the last section of the manorial account, deals with the various branches of the live stock and their profits, together with their store of meat, wine and cider, honey and fruit. These are arranged in a definite order beginning with the three principal classes of the live stock, namely, (1) horses, (2) cattle, (3) sheep, followed by notices of (4) wool, and (5) cheese. The position of the remaining items is subject to many variations, but the pigs always precede the poultry, and the larder with the inventory of the cellar (if any) come near the end.

Each section is treated on a common plan, setting forth the remainder (if any) of stock or goods from last year, the changes taking place during the year, and finally, the result, showing the quietus, superplus, or defectus, as the case may be. The account also refers back, sometimes expressly, as in the case of hides, wools, wool-fells, and cheese, sometimes incidentally, as in the case of stock bought or sold, to the earlier portion of the manorial account, particularly to the Exitus Manerii and Expensa. It is thus possible to verify the totals in many instances.

The totals of the live stock are generally more accurate than those of the hides, wool-fells, etc. Totals are frequently right in gross, but wrong in detail.¹ Many mistakes of this kind appear, which in most cases admit of correction when compared with the supplementary evidence of the related sections. The defects are not all of them favourable to the bailiffs, in which case we could reasonably suspect fraud.

Space forbids a detailed consideration of the valuable evidence contained in the thirty-three stock accounts of the Roll. In the Appendix will be found two general tables, one specifying the numbers and distribution of each kind of stock among the several manors, showing the additions made during the year, by way of produce and acquisition, as well as the losses incurred by murrain and other causes. The second table shows the profits arising from the various kinds of stock, including hides, wool-fells, cheese, etc., produced and sold in the several manors during the same period.

The manorial stock is treated of here in the following order:— (1) Equine class (including asses), (2) Bovine class, (3) Ovine class (including goats), (4) The Dairy, (5) Porcine class, (6) Poultry, (7) The Larder, Kitchen, and Salt-store, (8) The Cellar, (9) Miscellaneous (Nuts, Cummin, etc.).

Horses.—The usual terms of stallion (stalo), mare (equa), and colt (pullus), or filly (pullana) occur, and there is a further distinctive nomenclature from the particular work performed. The avrus for the plough, and the carectarius for the cart. The riding horse (palefridus) and the sumpter-horse (summarius) are also incidentally mentioned in connection with the Bishop's Itinerary.²

Under the name equus silvestris the famous forest pony of Hampshire is apparently referred to. Eighteen Welsh mares were received in Clere and Mardon during the year. In both cases they were drafted into the forest pony stock.

About fourteen per cent. of the whole number of horses was lost by murrain. The hides are carefully accounted for, and are for the most part sold. Four were dealbated for local manorial purposes.³ The cost of dealbating a hide was 4*d.* The highest price received for a horse-hide is 13*d.* at Adderbury, which is exceptional, the average price being about 6*d.* Asses were kept at Waltham and Witney.

Cattle.—The cattle stock may be divided into two classes: (1) The active class, including (a) the parent or producing stock—the taurus and vacca; (b) the working or non-producing stock—the boves. (2) The store cattle (otiosa animalia) comprising the vituli, the annales, and the boveti and geniculae of all ages.

The latter class is sometimes technically called the "instaurum" or "store," by which the active class are supplemented during the year. Geniculae is the name by which heifers of all ages, above one year, are known until they are added to the vaccae. Similarly boviculi is the term applied to bullocks of all ages above one year prior to their advancement to the boves; the younger ones are termed boveti juniores, in contradistinction to the boveti prolixioris or provectionis aetatis.

² On p. 60 we have the phrase "equos molindum."

The boves form the most numerous section of the cattle stock, and take an important part in the working of the manor. The majority were employed in agricultural operations, and others were fattened for the larder,¹ etc. Quantities of hay were bought in some manors for the oxen,² in addition to the ordinary provender of corn, and in some instances expense was incurred for the special provision of water.³ All the cattle (161) "bought" in the Roll are boves, some of them expressly to relieve the plough-teams.⁴ As compared with last year, the number remaining is 64 less. The number sold is perhaps unusually large, some of the oxen sold being old and infirm ("veteres et debiles").⁵ The number of calves produced is a little more than half the number of cows remaining last year. About forty per cent. were barren, and besides this, some died ante foetum.⁶ The amount and value of cheese and butter produced and sold will be found stated elsewhere.⁷

A little more than ten per cent. of the entire cattle died. With the exception of nine (eight of which are calf skins) the hides are all accounted for. Calf-skins (once termed pelles) were of little value;⁸ they were sometimes sold at a penny each. The average price of the ox-hide was about 18*d.* Hides of slain (occisi) are apparently of a higher value than those of the murrain (mortui) oxen.

Sheep.—The division of the sheep flock is parallel to that of the cattle-herd. The active class including (1) the parent or producing stock—the hurtardus and the ovis matrix; and (2) the non-producing stock—the multones and hoggetti.

Hoggetti are yearling lambs, before their transfer (after shearing) from the Instaurum to the respective flocks. When distinguished as to sex, the males are called masculi, the females gerciae.

The multones and hurtardi are sometimes classed together (p. 82). Eighteen multones and 22 hurtardi from Lincolnshire, were introduced into the flocks of Clere, Downton, and Farnham. The term cuillardus is used in one instance as an alternative for multo.⁹

Only the oves matrices were expected to bear lambs. From the evidence of the account it is clear that a ewe produced only one lamb, a single exception occurring at Adderbury. Some of the gerciae occasionally bear lambs. These are always accounted for separately, and we find no effort on the part of the bailiffs to check their number as in the case of the oves matrices, where all changes taking place "ante partum" and "post partum" are carefully noted. Hogget-lambs tended to weaken the stock, and the twelve produced at Alresford all died. A *custos agnorum*¹⁰ during the lambing season is sometimes referred to in the Roll. Hay was bought¹¹ and corn used¹² in some of the manors for the ewes and lambs.

About three and a half per cent. of the producing flock were barren, and nearly fifty lambs were lost by abortion. A tenth of the lambs produced of course went as tithes.¹ Several were also given in customary payments to servants of the manor. Mutton was chiefly used during the harvest season, in contrast to the beef and pork consumed in the autumn and winter.

As elsewhere, the flocks were made use of for fertilizing purposes. The practice of folding is frequently referred to.² It was one of the chief duties of the shepherd to see that all the sheep lay in the fold over night, so that the land might benefit from the compost. Gilbert, the shepherd at Wargrave, was amerced 6*d.* for neglect of this.³

It has been previously noted that in some few cases sheep were let "at farm" as was the milk of more than four hundred ewes at Meon.⁴ Other items of profit derived from the sheep flock were the receipts for wool and wool-fells sold.

Wools are divided into vellera grossa (or crispa) and vellera agnina. To check the amount produced, all changes occurring in the stock "ante tonsionem" and "post tonsionem" are noted. Sixty-eight small lambs (subtiles agni) in Crawley were left unshorn. Stray wool to the value of 6*s.* was collected at Clere. Wool was sold by weight. The shepherd usually had a fleece, and in three cases the dairymaid. In the section of the Expensa there are usually some interesting details of the canvas and thread bought, and the sarpelers made to contain the large wool, as well as of the sacks purchased to contain the lock-wool.

The total loss by murrain for the whole flock is equal to twenty per cent.; that of the lambs alone is about thirty-seven per cent.

Goats.—Goats appear in Bitterne and Wicombe and were all disposed of during the year. The he-goat is termed a "buke" and the she-goat a matrix capra, the kids being known as capreoli.

The Dairy.—The profits of the dairy appear among the items of the Exitus Manerii. The incidental costs (custus daerie) connected therewith, e.g., the purchase of tins, pans, pots, jars, salt, etc., will be found in the Expensa. The Instaurum gives the number of cheeses produced and their disposal by way of customary payments, sale, etc. Only nine of the manors sell butter during the year, the total value being 10*s.* 4*d.*

Compared with the previous year there is a decrease of nearly three hundred in the number of cheeses left over. The production under this head was doubtless affected by the drought in this year previously referred to. As usual cheeses were chiefly made from May to Michaelmas. Some were made during the winter season from October to February, and during the season from February to May (ante ablactationem), when most of the milk was used in the rearing of the young calves.

Pigs.—The pig and poultry classes form the more transient section of the live stock. They are short-lived, and reach their maturity and accomplish their function at a much earlier age than the horse, ox, and sheep. This has its marked effect both on the nomenclature and on the form of account.

² Cf. p. 9, l. 29, et passim.

⁴ Here the Church took its tithes from the money-rent (cf. pp. 48, 49).

Omitting the parent stock (verres and sus), the rest of the porci fall into two divisions, those above (super) and those below (infra) the age of one year. Litters (of which more than one was occasionally produced by each sow during the year)¹ contain the porcelli, sometimes termed porcelli juniores, to distinguish them presumably from those of the previous litters, porcelli separati. These latter are sometimes termed hogetti, and are thus distinguished from the porci superannati, though the term porcelli is in many instances indiscriminately used to include all those infra annum. The porci superannati are differentiated as to sex by the words masculi and femellæ, sometimes found as maelli and suellæ. As distinguished from the young sows (juniores sues or suellæ) the old sows (veteres sues) are called dominæ sues.

No pigs, it will be noticed, were sold. The porci were usually fattened during the winter² for the larder. Sucking pigs were received by the porcarius and were in great demand at the bishop's table.

Poultry.—Fowls and geese are the only species of poultry recorded. Little attention was apparently paid to the rearing of young fowls, the greater part received during the year coming from the custom of church-scot. They were mostly consumed by the bishop's household and the local officers. The surplus, after satisfying local requirements, was generally sent to the kitchen at Wolvesey. Here most of the eggs were also sent. Eggs are loosely accounted for. Fowls appear in 29 manors, but eggs only in 10, and in several of these are the product of customary dues. Only one dovecote, at Downton, is mentioned in this Roll.³ Wildfowl (aves) appear to have been rendered at Christmas by the tenants of one manor.⁴

The Larder.—The principal larders with their dependent manors have been referred to above.⁵ They supplied the bishop's household with bacon and beef during the year, and furnished similar foods to labourers during the autumn and other boon works. Venison was cured both at Waltham and Winchester.

Nearly five pounds worth of lard (unctum porci) was sold from the larders of Waltham, Witney, Downton, and Farnham. At Taunton, tallow was sold with the hides.

The incidental expenses connected with the larder include salt for the curing of the flesh.⁶ Drink and food were given to the male and female workers in addition to their money stipend.

The Cellar.—Wine and cider, the extraordinary and ordinary drink of the household and official class, appear in the Instaurum accounts of seven manors. Southampton and Exeter were the respective ports of supply for the Hampshire and Somerset manors. Cider was produced at home. In East Meon 8½*d.* is paid for making a tun of cider. Wine and cider, as may be seen from evidence contained in other sections of the Roll, were largely used in the "scotales."

Beer, which is not referred to in the Instaurum, was largely consumed by the workers in the larder.

Fruit.—Nuts were grown on several manors, and were apparently included in the Instaurum when not disposed of during the year. Six quarters remained from last year at Meon. During this year nuts were sold from the following manors:—Waltham, 2s. 6d.; Clere, 3s. 10½d.; Itchingswell, 2s.; Witney, 15s.; Bitterne, 6s. 6d.; Meon, 10s.; Hambledon, 2s.; Taunton, 2s. 9½d.; and Wield, 1s. 4d. Total value, 2l. 11s. The Taunton account includes the dues received for “nutting.” The average price of nuts per quarter is about 1s. 6d.

The total value of honey sold was 8s. 11d. and it was received at Waltham, 2½d.; Farnham, 4s.; Clere (“de consuetudine”), 2s.; Bitterne (“de purchasiis”), 2s. 0½d.; and Alresford, 8d.

A new orchard was planted at Meon during the year, and the old one at Marwell was cleaned and trimmed. Apples were sold at Southwark, 15s.; and at Alresford, 2s. 3¼d.

It has been already stated in the Prospectus of this Edition that the work of transcribing and extending the Text, together with the preparation of the Introduction, Index, and Glossary, have been entirely performed by the students of the class in Palæography, Diplomatic and Historical Sources of the London School of Economics, under the supervision of the Lecturer. This, indeed, must be regarded as an essential feature of an undertaking for which the only merit claimed lies in the value of the practicable experience thus acquired in several of the auxiliary branches of historical study. It will, however, be easily understood that the exigencies of an academic course have imposed strict limitations on the scope of the Editor’s researches. The present edition represents, in fact, merely the “practical work” of the weekly seminar, the application of the lecture courses of the past session on the “Seignorial position of the Church in the Middle Ages” to a selected thesis—the manorial system observed in the case of a single church in a given year. The end kept in view throughout the above course was the equipment of the students for the comparative study of the manorial economy in all its bearings throughout the period indicated, and specialization might have been attempted in any other direction for which opportunity served. The subject selected seemed, however, deserving of attention on account of the comparative neglect of this unique series of manorial records. At the same time, although the end has been held to justify the means, it must be admitted that the plan of such an Edition, however systematic in its method, leaves much to be desired in respect of the performance. Great difficulty, for example, has been experienced in securing uniformity in respect of the extension of the Text, and of the procedure employed for the purpose of an analysis of its economic evidence. The systematic and uniform extension of mediæval official documents is virtually an unknown practice in this country, whilst the number of alternative forms which may be found in mediæval glossaries increases the difficulty of co-operation by independent workers, and this difficulty has been enhanced in the case of the present MS. by the vagaries of the scribe.

Method of Editing.

The method pursued by the Editors may be briefly described as follows:—

1. The Text has been extended throughout as a matter of principle, to avoid the primitive expedient of “Record type” on the one hand, and the unsightly devices of italics and square brackets on the other.¹ The system of extension followed is that which appeared to be indicated by a close observation of the habits of the scribe. The original spelling has been preserved in the Text, but obvious errors have been indicated in the foot-notes. The habitual omission of the conjunction "et" has been merely indicated by the punctuation. The arrangement and spacing of the original account have been followed as far as practicable, and much pains have been taken to reproduce the general features of the MS. without resorting to typographical imitation. Roman figures have been preserved, if only to enable the mediæval system of numeration to be represented in the Text. The capitalization and punctuation of the MS. have, however, been modernized, and the orthography of certain letters has been also modernized, in accordance with the practice of the Rolls Series.²

2. The Introduction, Indices, and Glossary have been assigned, like the Text itself, to groups of students working independently, guided to some extent by the general course of lectures on Manorial Sources, and by a special course of lectures on historical composition and criticism. In the first place an attempt has been made to describe the official classification and custody of the MS., its palæographical and diplomatic characteristics and its historical and economic interest. In the Index of Places the identifications have been given to the best of the Editors' abilities, according to the admirable method of the Rolls series of mediæval calendars; but, following the practice of English editions, this process has not been applied to the names of persons, these being for the most part of very little interest. Space could not be found for a full Glossarial Index, but the recurrent terms of the account have been discussed at some length in the Introduction, where they are illustrated by references to the Text itself.

The publication in a separate form of the sources, both manuscript and printed, which have been collected and utilised for the purpose of this Edition, is contemplated at a later date; but the Editors wish to take the present opportunity of gratefully acknowledging the courtesy of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the assistance and encouragement which they have received from the Director of the School, from the Authorities of the Public Record Office and British Museum, and from the Committee for furthering Advanced Historical Studies in London. They also wish to express their obligations to the Printers (Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode).

The following members of the Class co-operated generally in the present Edition:—Rev. H. Birt (O.S.B.), F. Bradshaw, M. M. Calthrop, M. E. Carter, R. P. Chope, E. F. Churchill, F. G. Davenport, L. Drucker, J. Greaves, H. Hadley, C. Hogg, E. M. Leonard, E. A. Lewis, H. R. Maynard.

Of the above, Mr. H. R. Maynard is responsible for the section on Manorial Communications, Miss E. M. Leonard for that on the Manorial Revenues and Services, with some assistance from Miss F. G. Davenport;

¹ Doubtful extensions, particularly of proper names, are given in square brackets. Extensions not attempted are indicated by an apostrophe.

² It must not, however, be supposed that this implies an expression of opinion as to the correctness of the form in question. The students are equally instructed in the method which is now more general, but which renders an historical text practically as useless as "Record type" to the uninitiated.

Messrs. R. P. Chope and E. A. Lewis have written the sections on Manorial Crops and Stock respectively, and have compiled the accompanying Tables. Mr. Chope has also compiled the General Balance Sheet. The Palæographical and Diplomatic descriptions of the Record were drafted by the Lecturer. The Index of Persons has been compiled by Miss M. E. Carter, and that of Places by Miss H. Hadley and Miss L. Drucker, and they are also respectively responsible for the information concerning Persons and Places in the Introduction. The first half of the Glossary (A—K) has been contributed by Mr. E. F. Churchill, and the remaining letters by Mr. F. Bradshaw.

² The Roll does not confirm the presence of either bishop or king on these dates, but undated notices occur of the presence of the bishop at Witney and Cranborne; of the king at Gillingham; and of bishop and king together at Winchester, Farnham, and Bishop's Sutton.

³ The birth of Prince Richard at Winchester on this date is not alluded to in the Roll.

⁴ The Roll mentions the carriage of arms and provisions between Witney and Tewkesbury, but no date is given.

² Taunton charges for the maintenance of the bishop's household, awaiting the arrival of the bishop and the king; but neither in the Roll nor in Hardy's itinerary is there any evidence of the date or actual occurrence of the visit. An attempt has also been made, though without success, to identify the delivery of the "tun of good wine" which the contemporary Pipe Roll records as the fine assessed upon the bishop for failing "to remind the king about giving a girdle to the Countess of Albemarle." (Pipe Roll, 11 John, Southampton).

THE
LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

CLARE MARKET, LONDON, W.C.

THE special aim of the London School of Economics and Political Science is the study and investigation of Economic and Political Institutions.

Most of the teaching in the Faculty of Economics and Political Science (including Commerce and Industry), newly created by the reorganised University of London, is provided by the School of Economics, whose curriculum is arranged as a three years' course of study for students desirous of proceeding to the degree of B.Sc. in Economics.

Many of the Lectures and Classes are designed to promote a wider knowledge of modern commercial conditions and to meet the needs of those engaged in the civil and municipal services, journalism, teaching, and public work. The School provides training in methods of investigation, including Palæography and Diplomatic, and affords facilities for original work in Economics, History, and Political Science.

The fee for the full course is £10 a year or £3 10s. a term, but students other than University students are admitted to individual courses of lectures at fees varying according to the number of lectures in the course.

Lectures are held on Economics, Statistics, Commercial and Political History and Geography, Law (International, Constitutional, and Commercial), Public Administration, Public Finance, Accountancy, Banking, Insurance, Transport, Foreign Trade, etc., when possible, in the evening between 6 and 9.

The School is open to men and women.

The Academic year begins in October, and is divided into three terms of ten weeks each, viz.: (1) October to December; (2) January to March; (3) April to July. Students may join the School at any time.

Scholarships are given to enable students of ability to pursue their studies at the School.

Full particulars may be obtained from the Director at the School.

"A permanent and invaluable contribution to the sum of human knowledge. . . . We commend to the public a book which is a monument of research and full of candour. . . . Indispensable to every publicist and politician."—Times, 4th January, 1898 (day of publication).

INDUSTRIAL DEMOCRACY.

By SIDNEY and BEATRICE WEBB

(Authors of "The History of Trade Unionism.")

ADVERTISEMENT.

IN this work the authors of "The History of Trade Unionism" deal, not with the past, but with the present. They describe, with the systematic detail of the scientific observer, and in the same objective spirit, all the forms of Trade Unionism, Factory Legislation, and other regulations of industry to be found in the British Isles. The whole structure and function of Labour Organisation and Restrictive Legislation in every industry is analysed and criticised in a manner never before attempted. The employer in difficulties with his workman, the trade unionist confronted with a fresh assault upon his standard rate, the politician troubled about a new project for Factory Legislation, the public-spirited citizen concerned as to the real issues of a labour dispute, will find elucidated in this work the very problems on which they are thinking. It is a storehouse of authenticated facts about every branch of the "Labour Question," gathered from six years' personal investigation into every industry in all parts of the kingdom; systematically classified and made accessible by an unusually elaborate Index.

But the Book is more than an Encyclopædia on the Labour Question. Scientific examination of trade union structure reveals, in these thousand self-governing republics, a remarkable evolution in democratic constitutions, which throws light on political problems in a larger sphere. The century-long experience of these working-class organisations affords unique evidence as to the actual working of such expedients as the Referendum, the Initiative, Government by Mass Meeting, Annual Elections, Proportional Representation, Payment of Members, and, generally, the relation between the Citizen-elect, the chosen Representative, and the Executive Officer. The intricate relations of trade with trade have an interesting bearing upon such problems as Local Government, Federation, and Home Rule. Those who regard the participation of a working-class electorate in the affairs of government as the distinctive, if not the dangerous, feature in modern politics, will here find the phenomenon isolated, and may learn how the British workman actually deals with similar issues in his own sphere.

The analysis of the working of Trade Unionism and Factory Legislation in the various industries of the United Kingdom has involved a reconsideration of the conclusions of Political Economy. The authors give a new and original description of the working of industrial competition in the business world of to-day; and they are led to important modifications of the views currently held upon Capital, Interest, Profits, Wages, Women's Labour, the Population Question, Foreign Competition, Free Trade, &c. The latter part of the work is, in fact, a treatise upon Economics.

Finally, it should be stated that the authors, in the Preface, describing their investigations, propound a new view as to the scope and method of Political Science.
